When using telework and/or remote work, the Contractor remains responsible for TO performance and compliance with any applicable cost accounting standards and contract cost principles/procedures.

Telework is defined as an alternative workplace arrangement under which a position performs the duties and responsibilities of the assigned position and other authorized activities from an approved alternative worksite, but is required to report to the agency's worksite on a regular and recurring basis. Telework can be either routine or situational. Routine telework is performed from an alternative worksite on regularly scheduled telework day(s), whereas situational telework is authorized on a case-by-case basis as the need arises or when opting for unscheduled telework and may be authorized for routine teleworkers in such circumstances on regularly scheduled in-office days.

Telework eligible positions require routine on-site performance of two days per week, to include a required day of Wednesday. On-site performance may be required outside of routine on-site performance days, and shall be provided when requested by the COR.

Remote work is an alternative work arrangement that allows for a position to perform official duties at an approved alternative worksite away from an agency worksite, without regularly returning to the agency worksite during each pay period. Remote work can be either local or distant.

Distant remote work is defined as a position that does not require regular and recurring on-site performance and is not required to be staffed within 50 drivable miles of NAWCAD WOLF, St. Inigoes, MD but shall be staffed within the United States.

In the event that telework tools become unavailable while working off-site, the Contractor shall require positions defined as telework and local remote work to report on-site in order to access the tools required for performance of this TO.

At any time during TO performance, the COR may determine that a position is no longer eligible for telework and/or local remote work by providing a notice 30 calendar days in advance and/or for distant remote telework positions by providing a notice 90 calendar days in advance so the Contractor can address changes needed to support mission requirements.
