6. Rationale for Single Source

DoDEA requires a one-year sole-source bridge contract for AP® English Literature and Composition instructional resources to ensure continuity of instruction for approximately 1,000 students, 40 teachers, and above-school-level subject matter experts, for the reasons outlined below.

Time Constraints Due to Government Shutdown: The recent extended government shutdown disrupted critical acquisition planning activities during a pivotal phase of the procurement timeline. As a result, the remaining time available before the required award date has been significantly compressed. Several acquisition steps that normally occur sequentially must now be completed within a substantially reduced timeframe, including:

- Conducting required coordination and feedback sessions with AP® Literature and Composition teachers and subject-matter experts;
- Completing comprehensive market research and validating instructional and technical requirements;
- Developing the performance work statement, independent government cost estimate, and acquisition strategy;
- Preparing, posting, and administering a full and open competitive solicitation;
- Convening a technical evaluation board with educator representation aligned to the academic calendar;
- Completing proposal evaluations, award analysis, and related administrative processes; and
- Providing professional learning and transition support for teachers should a new vendor be selected.

Because these activities must align with the academic calendar and the AP® Literature instructional cycle, the remaining schedule does not allow sufficient time to complete a full and open competition prior to the start of School Year (SY) 2026–27. Proceeding without a bridge would create an unacceptable risk of instructional disruption.

Continuity of Instruction: DoWEA educators who teach AP® Literature and Composition have already been extensively trained on the Cengage Learning platform and its integrated resources. This platform is currently in use and is embedded in the instructional framework for the course.

Unacceptable Delays in Fulfilling the Agency's Requirements: Requiring a transition to a different resource for this one-year bridge period would introduce unacceptable delays. If another vendor were selected, all 43 teachers would need to be re-trained on the new platform, curriculum, and digital tools. Given the academic calendar for this training, there is insufficient time and money to execute this training without significantly disrupting lesson planning and student learning at the start of the school year.

Inefficient Use of Resources: Awarding a contract to another vendor for a single year, with a full and open competition planned for FY27, would be an imprudent use of DoWEA's limited professional learning time and funds. Any training conducted for a temporary, one-year resource would risk becoming obsolete once the long-term competitive contract is awarded in FY27, forcing teachers to undergo training for a third time. Procuring the incumbent's resources for this limited bridge period ensures that training efforts are not duplicative and that funds are preserved.

Based on this rationale, Cengage Learning, Inc. is the only source capable of providing the required resources without causing unacceptable delays and creating instructional risk for students and teachers during the specified period.
