3. Description of Services or Supplies: The Combat Capabilities Development Command (DevCom), Aviation and Missile Center (AvMC), Software Simulation Systems Engineering and Integration Directorate (S3I) has a requirement to purchase No Magic Cameo software. Cameo 2024x licenses is essential for our operations in the SIPR lab, as they enable us to effectively support the Model-Based Systems Engineering (MBSE) efforts required by our customers in the classified environment. Cameo is the Army's standard MBSE modeling tool, widely utilized by PEO MS and PEO Aviation, ensuring alignment with Army direction and customer requirements. As an MBSE tool that enforces the SysML language, Cameo is necessary for properly conducting MBSE processes, as a tool that adheres to SysML standards is critical for successful implementation. Without these licenses, we would be unable to meet the MBSE demands of our stakeholders.

5. Reasons for Authority Cited:

a. Cameo is a comprehensive solution for organizations to create, analyze, and manage various aspects of enterprise architecture. Cameo Model Based System Engineering (MBSE) emphasizes using models as the central hub for information, enabling a more visual and intuitive representation of complex systems. It allows the creation of holistic and detailed models of systems, covering everything from requirements and architecture to behavior and parametric analysis. Cameo is the Army's standard MBSE modeling tool, widely utilized by PEO MS and PEO Aviation, ensuring alignment with Army direction and customer requirements.

b. Other products, such as IBM Rhapsody, were researched; however, IBM Rhapsody does not provide a comprehensive solution that aligns closely with PEO Aviation's enterprise architecture goals. It lacks support for some of the customer's frameworks and does not encompass all the necessary capabilities for implementing a comprehensive Modular Open Systems Architecture (MOSA) strategy as required by the customer. Additionally, it does not integrate with the Future Airborne Capability Environment (FACE) Technical Standard supporting software Skayl Phenom, which is essential for ingesting the data model and generating the required Interactive Data Languages (IDLs) for our software development in alignment with those models. Subject Matter Experts (SMEs) remain informed about new technologies and continue to endorse Cameo as the preferred MBSE tool. Cameo fully meets all the requirements expected for delivery to the customer, and there is no added value in transitioning to an alternative solution.

c. Cameo has already been used to create an extensive data store of relevant data models for our current initiatives. Utilizing an alternative solution would significantly inhibit progress, leading to cost and schedule implications due to the learning curve associated with transitioning to another brand's tool. Additionally, substantial time would be required to ensure that existing data stores and elements can be accurately translated, execute the migration, and verify the integrity of the resulting dataset. The process of considering an alternate system would not only be costly but also unproven and an inefficient use of the government's time and resources.
