Potential Sole Source and limiting competition Notice: The USG has identified a potential sole source capable of meeting the Government's requirement for the Virtual Air Defense Systems Integrator (ADSI) software. In addition to assessing potential sole source considerations, the USG is also evaluating whether the unique technical characteristics of the ADSI software—its certified, combat-proven tactical data link capabilities; its ability to operate in a virtualized environment; and its provision of secure serial and Ethernet Link 16 and Link 11 communications—may constitute a brand-name limiting competition requirement under FAR 13.101. If market research confirms that ADSI-specific components, interfaces, or OEM-certified services are essential to achieving required interoperability, cybersecurity posture, and operational continuity for command and control (C2) and situational awareness functions, the Government may pursue a sole source acquisition strategy and/or a brand-name limiting competition document to support any future solicitation. Respondents are encouraged to identify whether they can provide ADSI-equivalent capabilities or alternative solutions that meet all technical requirements without degrading compatibility, performance, or mission effectiveness.

8. Recommendations to improve the approach/specifications/draft PWS/PRS to acquiring the identified items.
