SF-330 PART I

<https://www.andanaconsulting.com/2022/03/16/general-rules-for-the-sf330/>

•Part I – Section D – Organizational Chart. The org chart demonstrates alignment of the Key Personnel to the required disciplines. General rules – only show the personnel you are providing resumes for in Section E. No need to add extra names just to show depth – use Section H.

•Part I – Section E – Resumes. Agencies evaluate your Professional Qualifications by reviewing resumes of Key Personnel. Make sure your resumes meet the requirements for education, certifications, and experience. General rules – one page per resume, five projects per resume, project experience within the last 10 years (be sure to check the requirements)

•Part I – Section A-C – Firm information. This is where you list your contact information and detail the locations and expertise of your team. General rules – the locations in Section C align to your Part IIs which align to the locations of the Key Personnel in Section E. No need to show other office locations in C.

•Part I – Section F – Projects. Agencies evaluate your team's Specialized Experience and Technical Competence by reviewing the 10 projects in Section F. Make sure your projects are well-rounded to demonstrate experience with the required services and scopes in the synopsis. General rules – one page per project, no more than 10 projects (though check the requirements – these rules often change).

•Part I – Section G – Matrix. Sometimes the trickiest part of the SF330, the matrix cross references the Key Personnel from Section E to the projects in Section F. This is a snapshot for evaluators to see if your people worked on your projects, and if your teaming partner firms have worked together. General rules – We like to aim for at least one X per project and at least one X per person.

Sometimes, for specialty services like archaeology, the person will not have an X since they don't work on every projects. For your main personnel, like Project Manager, it is stronger to show them managing several similar projects. The more Xs your matrix has, the better, but evaluators understand nuances for specialty roles and new hires. Make a point to explain this in Section H too.

•Part I – Section H – Additional Information. This section is the narrative. The synopsis usually outlines what content agencies want to see in this narrative. Contents usually include the firm overviews, discussions of past performance, capacity, knowledge of locality, geographic location, additional experience, additional professional qualifications, quality control, and/or program management. Sometimes other information is required such as small business participation or volume of DoD awards. General rules -Review the synopsis carefully to make sure you include all the narratives they require. Sometimes they ask for additional details here (such as percent involvement of each teaming partner or the DUNS and TIN of the prime). You don't want to miss including those items.

SF-330 PART II

<https://www.andanaconsulting.com/2022/03/16/general-rules-for-the-sf330/>

•Part IIs. The Part IIs are required for each firm on your team, and for each location shown on Section E Resumes. These locations line up with Section C. General rules – If you have a teaming partner but are not showing a resume from their firm, they still must have a Part II and still must be shown on Section C. Just select the primary office that will do the work for your contract. Part IIs must be signed and dated, usually once a year is fine, they do not need updated for each pursuit just make sure they are signed within a year of the submission date (unless otherwise noted in the requirements).

•Attachments. Sometimes attachments are required to support your SF330. Most of the time these include PPQs/CPARS, JV Agreements, Small Business Participation Plans, or copies of licenses, or other documents required by the synopsis. General rules – If needed, we reference the attachments where appropriate in Section H. Then, we provide the attachments either after the signature page of Part I or after the Part IIs. Tabs or cover pages help evaluators find what they need.
